WORKING DRAFT
8 August 1966

SUBJECT: Comments on Appendices

1. Appendix I -- Essential Imagery Interpretation Products and Services. Discusses the relationships of the various imagery interpretation products and services, and the basic support concept in its relationship to the phases of readout and direct support. Annex A of this Appendix lists all the organizations served, and Annex B tabulates the services and products which they need. The two annexes maybe pretty useful in providing an appreciation of the total needs of the community as well as an indication of overlap and duplication in intelligence reporting responsibility.

2. Appendix K -- The Proposed National Imagery Exploitation Target Base. Appendix K is a numbers game which becomes important if the need imagery interpreters becomes closely tied to the number of targets. A summary chart is particularly useful. An inspection of this chart demonstrates that the numbers grow very rapidly as they become related to military interest. The ability of NPIC to maintain all, or part, of the imagery interpretation exploitation base without reducing its service for direct support to USIB committees, etc., should be considered.
